Mobile site Sign in Register A Text larger · smaller

About Us About us Contact us Press office Guardian Print Centre Guardian readers' editor Observer readers' editor Terms of service Privacy policy Advertising guide

Digital archive Digital edition Guardian Weekly Buy Guardian and Observer photos Subscribe

Today's paper The Guardian Comment and debate Editorials, letters and corrections Obituaries Other lives Sport Review Travel Family Money Work Weekend The Guide Subscribe

Zeitgeist Today's hot topics

Search C guardian.co.uk Books C Web Search

News Sport Comment Culture Business Money Life & style Travel Environment TV Video Community Blogs Jobs

Culture Books

🥸 b 🖪

Tweet this

💷 🖂 🧲 g

Books

Culture

Martin Amis

More news

More on this story

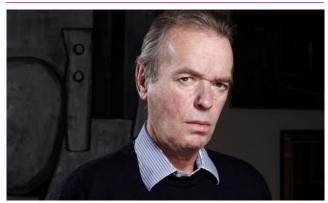

More on Martin Amis

A larger | smaller

Martin Amis: 'I wish my sister had converted to Islam'

Martin Amis suggests to Dubai English-language newspaper that his sister, an alcoholic who died in 2000, "might still be alive" if she had converted to Islam

Alison Flood guardian.co.uk, Tuesday 16 March 2010 11.52 GMT

Martin Amis Photograph: Suki Dhanda

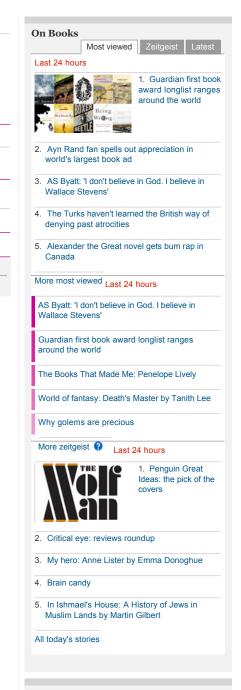

Martin Amis might have expressed negative views about Islam in the past, but the author told an Abu Dhabi newspaper this week that he believed that if his sister, Sally, an alcoholic who died in 2000, had converted to the religion she might still be alive.

Interviewed by Abu Dhabi English-language newspaper The National,

Amis said he wished his sister had converted to Islam. "To this day I have this wish – she was always religious and she converted to Catholicism. I wish she had converted to Islam. She might still be alive because of the continence of Islam, the austerity, the demands it makes on you. I just sort of helplessly think it every now and then. She would only be 56 now and she'd still be here," said Amis, who is in Dubai to take part in the Emirates Airline Festival of Literature.

Sally Amis, whom the author has described as "pathologically promiscuous", died aged 46 after periods of depression and alcoholism. Her brother believes that the structure of Islam might have saved her life. "She was such an uncontrollable girl that there was even talk of her joining the army when she was 17 or 18 because we all sensed that she needed a really tight structure, an ésprit de corps of shared belief," he told The National. "Islam in its way gives you that, a collectivity that she could have been a part of, which incidentally forbade alcohol and premarital sex. She might have had a chance. She would have had to embrace it earlier than she embraced Catholicism."

Amis courted controversy in 2006 with his comment to a newspaper that "there's a definite urge – don't you have it? – to say the Muslim community will have to suffer until it gets its house in order". The National reported that the author "seemed somewhat penitent" over the remarks

Guardian Books on Twitter

Latest news, views and links from the Guardian's books team during an event at the literary festival, where he was interviewed by author and broadcaster Paul Blezzard.

"It was a rash remark made at a terrible time. Ten years on from September 2001, we have still not got a usable word for what we mean. People think you are talking about Islam but you are not. 'Islamism' is hopeless because it has got too many letters in common with Islam. I suggest we call it al-Qaida," said Amis. "What I said was that there was an urge. No one can tell me that there was not. By the next day, I had changed my mind because that is collective punishment, but people were saving that. More than 95% of Muslims are horrified by this ridiculous. nihilistic wing and should not be connected verbally or otherwise with these extremists."

After Blezzard joked that there had been a sweepstake over how long it would take Amis to get through immigration when he arrived in Dubai, the author said he had "met with nothing but extreme courtesy in this country".

Related information

Books Martin Amis

Culture

Video (10min 23sec), Martin Amis on euthanasia

1 Feb 2010:

Video: Controversial author Martin Amis joins the Guardian book club to discuss his 1991 novel Time's Arrow and is asked about his views on euthanasia

More video

25 Feb 2010

Anna Ford v Martin Amis - the final episode (for

31 Jan 2010 Did I say that? Martin

30 Jan 2010 Letters: Ageing Amis and his lethal martinis

25 Aug 2009 How well do you know Martin Amis?

Gallery (14 pictures): Martin Amis at 60 25 Aug 2009:

Martin Amis, the one-time enfant terrible of the British literary establishment, turns 60 today. Take a look at a life in pictures of the author of Money, London Fields, and Time's Arrow

More galleries

carmitstead: I've discovered some wonderful books - more than could fit on first book longlist - but am frustrated by the standard of editing #books about 8 hours, 19 minutes ago paullaity: Colm Toibin at Guardian Review book club last night. Wonderful. He can't write a bad sentence, and is an expert distributor of charm #books about 8 hours, 32 minutes ago michellepauli: Authors+games: With Chris Ryan writing Medal of Honour novel, should Terry Pratchatt novelise Monkey Island? http://gu.com/p/2javm/tw #books about 15 hours. 6 minutes ago

- Find more tweets from our books team
- Follow our books team on a Twitter list

guardianbookshop

This week's bestsellers

1. American Caesars AMERICAN by Nigel Hamilton £25.00

2. It's All About the Bike

by Robert Penn £16.99

3. Red Men

by John Williams £16.99

4. Finkler Question

by Howard Jacobson £18.99

5. Flavour Thesaurus

by Niki Segnit £18.99

Search the Guardian bookshop

Search

Latest reviews

Faithful Place by Tana

A dark, creepy Dublin is the setting for one of the best thrillers this year, writes Alison Flood

Devilfish: The Life and Times of a Poker Legend by Dave Ulliot

In Ishmael's House: A History of Jews in Muslim Lands by Martin Gilbert

Sue Arnold's audiobooks review roundup

What to Look for in Winter by Candia McWilliam

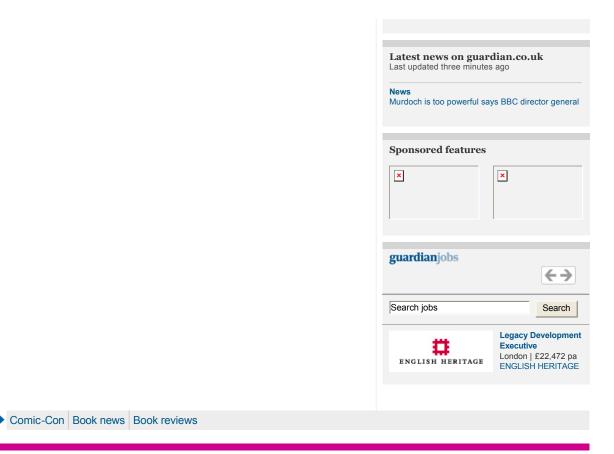

More books reviews

Bestsellers from the Guardian shop

Ecuadorian Panama hat Genuine Ecuadorian ladies' Panama hat with attractive braided trim. From: £35.95

Visit the Guardian reader offers shop Green & ethical shopping at Guardian ecostore

License/buy our content | Privacy policy | Terms & conditions | Advertising guide | Accessibility | A-Z index | Inside guardian.co.uk blog | About guardian.co.uk | Join our dating site today guardian.co.uk © Guardian News and Media Limited 2010

Hot topics